

if I could only look beneath my skin, I'd see my body as alive as Hong Kong, veins of night traffic crawling along the freeways as tiny faces inside taxis look up from the glow of their phones, sensing that someone is watching.